“ I had a friend for over 60 years. We had nothing in common. So, why did we remain such good friends? I don't know. She was my Maid of Honor when Bob and I got married. (Yes...she wore a dress) She loved Bob and often stopped by the garage to spend time with him. We shared our good times and our bad times with each other. We shared many secrets too. I was blessed and honored to be among the few people she allowed to be in her life. We talked every few days. Cell phones made it possible to talk, even when she wasn't home. Now she is gone. During the last conversation we had, we made sure we told each other how much we cared about our friendship. She died. Carol Rue died. It hurts.

“ We knew Carol through her USPS rural delivery to our home that dates back to the early 80s. One rarely sees someone with Carol's selflessness and devotion to her postal career and customers. Simple extra steps like always bundling the mail with a rubber band so as not to have it spill on the ground when retrieving it from the mailbox, leaving a note alerting you that your letter was a little short on postage but she took care of it so it would be processed, and rolling into your driveway very late on Christmas Eve with a package you may be waiting for to give as a gift that evening or the next day. Carol was a realist who spoke candidly and direct, a trait we respected. Our thoughts and prayers go out to Carol's family, in particular Stephan.
