“ Diana was a truly friend of mine. When we had good times we used to share jokes, memes and a lot of good vibes. When we both went through dark times we used to pray for each other needs. She always was a good shoulder to lie on and she shared with me the tinnies but most human stuff of her life like how she enjoyed Ava's company. We met a long time ago (around 2002) and never met in person again due to the long distance between our homes. However we were very active mainly by messenger and she passing away was a true shock to me since we just talk to each other early that week.

I will for sure have her always in a special place on my mind and heart.
And as I always told her.... HUGS AND KISSES FROM MEXICO. Now all the way straight to Heaven.

LOVE, DIEGO

“ There are just so many wonderful memories of Aunt Di Di, but I have to say that one of my favorite memories was the day she came to my wedding. I was surrounded by my bridesmaids, maid of honor and maybe my Momma getting ready for that walk down the aisle. We heard a slight knock at the door and I turned to the door to see my Aunt Di Di walk in. I was so thrilled to see she made it! She said she wanted to come see me before the ceremony because she had a special gift for me. She then laid a beautiful brooch in my hands and told me it was Grandma's. I cried so hard. I tried not to because of makeup but it was unavoidable. She hugged me and told me how she loved me with her whole heart. I asked her if she could help pin it to my wedding dress. That was my 'something old' to complete the 'Something old, Something new, Something borrowed, Something blue'. Her presence at my wedding meant so much to me. She was a beautiful woman and I cherish every single moment with her. Rest in Heavenly peace Aunt Di Di, I love you and I will see you again someday.
