“ Hi everyone friends, and family of Brian Peterson. Brian and I met this Thanksgiving. and dated since he has past away sudden. He was the best thing that ever happened to me. we dated for a month. every anniversary would of been christmas eve, and his birthday January 24. we were made for each other. I thought he was gonna be the one I was going to marry. we just clicked. there was that spark and connection. that his mom Susan Peterson saw and my own mother. I never been so happy in just one month dating someone. the first time he asked me in that month would you like to date me? I said yes" I was the happiest girl in the world. he made me feel wanted. he opened doors for me, we played Call of Duty every sunday at his house, and had papa johns pizza and would just listen to music, and talk about cars. I can't live without him. I wish he was given a 2nd chance in life with his family and !!he didnt deserve this it wasn't his time to go. he was healthy, set goals in life, good head on his shoulders, very handsome, good career, funny, and treated a girl way they should be treated. I was torn to pieces when I found out he past away in his sleep suddenly. I still don't feel alive, I am lost without him. I never been so alone in my life. but I don't think I am because since he has past I have not felt alone in my room. I feel like he is watching over me. its not a bad sensation but I know im not alone in my room. I know its Brian. I just can't stop thinking about him everyday I still wait and feel like hes gonna call or text me when I know its not gonna happen. we talked for 3 hours every night on the phone and texted every hour. I never met a guy like him that did that. he made me feel special. I had butterflies everytime we hungout and talked or texted I never knew what butterflies felt like until I met the man of my dreams Brian Peterson. he was an aquarius I was pieces and I think that was another reason why we got attached he called me his pieces queen. and Ill never forget him. hes one of a kind to find. No one will ever take his place.

Brian Peterson - I miss you so much u have no idea!
