“ Anyone who knows our relationship knows we certainly had our ups and downs, but that was JUST US. As much as we fought, we loved 100 times more. Brian is my one true love, my great love story; case closed. I have no words to explain the horrific pain that I feel, however, he has left behind three beautiful gifts of love and I appreciate each one more than I can say. I am thankful for family and friends who are helping me through this and I am sorry that I am of no help to all others who grieve as I do. After services on Tuesday, all of Brian's family and friends are invited to our house at 356 Ridgeway (across from RV) to celebrate his life.##imported-begin##Tammi##imported-end##

“ Tammi, my heart is very heavy right now... I will truly miss my brother from another mother (OWM). We made such a strong connect from the very beginning. And you know Brian could never keep a secret. Just a quick stroll down memory lane... I remember planning your surprise baby shower at the office and I told Brian, so he can pop up (to get food of course)and help you take your gifts home. I begged him to promise me he will not tell you. Well guess what he couldn't keep a secret, he slipped up. I remember you laughing saying "Deb, Brian can't keep a secret he did tried sooo hard. But he slipped one day and when I asked him what did he say he just walked away." He was one of the FIRST people to get a BIG MOUTH certificate sign by the boss (Joanne). I thought that memory would put a smile on your face. But real talk Tammi, this is going to be a journey. no one can tell you how to start and no one can tell you when it's going to end. Brian loved you with all his heart and soul and he loved his children. I traveled that journey before also, you are going to have good days and you are going to have bad days. But every time you look at Jackie and Gage your heart will smile. Tammi after a few weeks have passed and your friends and family return to to their normal lives, thats when you will feel your lost the most. But remember what I told you, if you need anything, a shoulder, a ear I'm just a phone call away. Love you Tammi and you know I loved Brian. I Have a hole in my heart that also has to mend. He will truly be missed. Wish you peace and comfort,Love Deborah##imported-begin##Deborah DeLaine##imported-end##

“ Dear Tammy--

Regardless of how Brian chose to live his life, he was a good boy. He has loved you since he first met you, adored his children, and was so proud when you both bought your first house.

There is nothing I can say to you that will make you feel better, bring you comfort, or ease your pain. The grief process is an individual journey. No two are alike. You will find your way. My advice to you is to listen to your own heart and soul, and not take suggestions or advice from anyone else. It will inevitably drive you crazy if you do. You have a wonderful family, and friends that will understand and support you.

My saving grace has been my Christian Counselor, Susan. I could not walk this walk without her.

I feel Dick with me 24/7 every single day. I kiss his picture in the morning. I talk to him throughout the day. Even though he is in heaven with all our loved ones, our bond of marriage has not been broken. I am still his wife and always will be.

You will be able to receive signs from Brian. I have received a multitude since Uncle Dick passed. Our former pastor said you cannot be afraid, and must keep an open mind and eyes in order to realize or see them.

However, don't think for 5 minutes that Brian is not still here. He will watch over you and the children, walk with you, continue to love you, guide you and protect you from harm. Trust your Aunt Debbie, I know.

Brian is a loss to me too.

Love from your Aunt Debbie##imported-begin##Debra A. Stevenson##imported-end##
