“ When i think i am getting better something im the universe shows me that I need more time. I'm back working at my original store....hoping that someone will finally recognize my hard work...

Anyways....i was walking to my store and I heard Sweet Love....and it stops me in my tracks....a smile and some tears....i can still imagine you with that hairbrush in your hand..

And me standing on the bed....with my side ponytail singing at the top of my lungs trying to sing harmony with you.....

We are singing a duet now....and it sounds wonderful....

Cindy would do anything for anyone, even if you needed a favor that's how kind and selfless she was. I hope a lot of people realize that about her, she had a huge heart.

Renee Dobrzynski

You don't need to tell us what she had or not. Selfless. I'm glad that later in life she could be that for others. I can totally see that about her. I wish she could have been that earlier in her life. It was hard for her. She was sick and couldn't recover from what she lost. No one knows that more than her children. I know there are many parts of her that we have. At the end she knew. That's all that matters.

“ It has been a while but the anger remains the same...
No one may understand what it was like for her children and that's ok....but where were all her "friends and family at the end"?? Did you visit her? Did you hold her hand at the end? No....no you did not..

We did! She would have been alone!

Think about that.

We were there.

:(I am glad, in the end, we were able to be there. The situation has been hard on everyone for years, for us and for her. It was less than ideal, no judgements are necessary on any of us. We all suffered, we all lost something or maybe everything over the last 30+ years; Ultimately, in the end, a gap that will never be filled. I love you. It doesn't matter what others do, only what you do, and you did what was right. xoxoxo

“ To The Family of Mrs. Cynthia M. Gehret, (DiGaetano)

With sincere sympathy in the loss of your dear one, there is very little one can do or say to help you bear the sorrow. But God is able to speak consolingly to those who are “broken hearted” Psalms 34:18. By means of God’s Word you will feel his love enfold you while his promises for the dead will comfort you Revelations 21:3-4, “and death will be no more, neither will mourning nor outcry nor pain be anymore.” Please read the Scriptures daily to truly benefit from God’s promises.

*Sincerely
Gladys Dickson*

“ So my first and very dear memory of my ex-sister in law was the first time Jerry had me meet the family. I was nervous for days before. We were all having dinner at her house. When we got to the door I could feel the dread and was very anxious. But after only a few minutes with her she made me feel so comfortable. It was like I had know her for ever. She welcomed me with open arms. She truly made me feel like family. I will always remember her smile. Its was contagious. Love to all of you. You will always be family to me.

Dear Cindy ,your passing was so sudden and we are always thinking of you and missing you always. Istill want to call you to discuss things that are going on about life, that you always had a special way of making us feel good.I know you would have loved seeing the pope when he came to Philadelphia.We miss you all the time, and I hope Tabithia is with you since you loved her so much.Thinking of you always, Janice Reed and Aunt Peg Rymsza.

Dear Cindy, remember when we would discuss that you wished God would come down and show some of the world, what was in store for them, if they the world didn't start shaping up and believing. That they should start be better people, forgiving more and helping those in need. I hope you finally got your point across and you are resting in peace. I wish you were going to be around this Christmas. Your life was to short but being being the good and caring person you were, you are in heaven making it a better place. You always were a great person to us, and made a difference in our lives. Wish you were here. Janice, and Aunt peg.

I understand that Cindy may have been troubled when her marriage ended, but later on in life she seemed to have changed for the better. She used to tell me how much she missed all her children and wished she could undo what happened. All I know is she was kind and would do us favors when we needed to go somewhere or she would just talk to us when we needed advice. She really did regret what happened earlier and would tell me about it. She was depressed and tried to make things better. All I know is that she meant well. She is missed and we will always think of her and remember how happy she was in her younger years with her children, back than her smile could light up a room.

Janice Reed - February 04, 2016 at 05:31 PM

RE

Janice,

Yes she could definitely light up a room! Most who met her were immediately drawn to her! My brother is the same way. It wasn't always easy for her....especially losing her father, her best friend! Cannot imagine what that was like.

..I am so thankful I still have mine because he is amazing! We've all lost. My sister, brother and I know this every day. I wish that everyone could see what it was like from our side without everyone's opinion of what they think that is....we truly suffered the greatest loss. I know she gave what she could. No matter what. I never needed anyone to tell me that. She just wasn't capable. I'm not sad about that anymore. I understand that now. I am sad that i cannot tell her that I understand.
