

David Everett Taylor

October 14, 1962 - December 29, 2017

David E. Taylor passed away peacefully at home on December 29, 2017 at the age of 55. He was born at Fort Dix Hospital and lived all his life in the Mt. Holly area.

He is survived by his wife of 29 years, Katherine, his children Heather and Brian, his parents, Phil and Jeannette, and his sister Linda.

David graduated from Trenton State College.

David worked for the Delran School system as a Technology Support Specialist. He loved his job and the people he worked with. He thought working for a school was the best job in the world.

David was a lover of reading, movies, travel, eating out and all things Apple.

His favorite authors were J.R.R. Tolkien, Stephen King, David Eddings, Arthur C. Clark and Stephen R. Donaldson.

He loved to quote movies and TV shows, especially Monty Python. We could never have cheese without him going into the Cheese Shop skit from Python. You couldn't have a conversation with Dave that wasn't filled with movie quotes.

His love of travel took him to London, Scotland, Jamaica, Mexico, Florida, New Hampshire, Vermont, South Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, San Francisco, South Carolina, and Martha's Vineyard, Kentucky, New York, Washington DC.

He loved to eat at Outback Steakhouse in every state he went to.

David was up for any adventure that his family came up with, even though he would rather be at home watching a movie or playing a video game. Some of the adventures he went on were rock climbing, mud runs, snorkeling, tandem parachuting, camping, paintballing, skiing, zip lining, hiking,

He loved to play Dungeons & Dungeons. He began playing D&D in high school and continued to play throughout the years with a great group of people.

He accepted his illness with a shrug and said, "It is, what it is." He believed that everything that could be done was being done and that the outcome was out of his hands. He tried to keep his sense of humor throughout the whole ordeal. He always tried to live life to the fullest. Before he passed he said that he had done so much in the time he was given. He had no regrets.

He was a loving husband and father. His family and friends will sorely miss him.

On Death:

GANDALF: End? No, the journey doesn't end here. Death is just another path, one that we all must take. The grey rain-curtain of this world rolls back, and all turns to silver glass, and then you see it.

PIPPIN: What? Gandalf? See what?

GANDALF: White shores, and beyond, a far green country under a swift sunrise.

PIPPIN: Well, that isn't so bad.

GANDALF: No. No, it isn't."

— J.R.R. Tolkien, The Lord of the Rings

I took this photo at Thorpe's house when we a got together to celebrate Mike Judge's 40th birthday. Classic Dave. ginger ale for a drink (no alcohol), a book n his hands, his wife by his side and I am sure he is telling us his unedited and complete opinion on the book. :)

That was what I loved most about Dave. He always told you straight up what was on his mind. And he was funny as shit. Our conversations were usually peppered with inside jokes, comedy bits from Monty Python and Bill Cosby, and taking some deity's name in vain. He made me laugh, he made me see things from different POVs and he never let me done.

Dave i will miss you. But every time I listen to the Monty Python Cheese Shop skit I will laugh and think of you and think of all the fun we had. Peace.

“ Because I am Mac-Stupid Dave became my hero, "The Wizard" I called him. Steve Jobs was not available back in the day so Dave stepped in to smooth over any annoying computer mysteries I had to deal with. Over time the connection turned into added lunch sessions, several of which took place at The Jersey Diner up on Rt. 130 near where he worked after MacXperts (aka The Computer Workshop) closed. I would give Dave photography advice regarding these goofy digital cameras that infected our tech lives and he would share computer tales. I was a firm believer in house service calls for Mac mysteries and Dave was always happy to take the check. One day after one such visit we spent as much time going over his high tech leased plug in Chevy as we did on the computer fix. A demonstration test drive got us right to a local diner for lunch. He quickly learned to point the glass end of the camera forward, mastered a few user demanded settings and often shared photos from trips. These photo reports showed he was a good listener, too. My regret for this message is that I searched in vain for a photo I once had that showed Dave on the floor under a computer work bench, feet sticking out one end an face peeking out of the side with wires in one hand and a couple held tightly between his teeth. When I shot the photo he said that others better not see it. He got his wish.

“ We all have great memories of Dave. I wish we could share them amongst us all. To me he was a kind 'big brother' type of person who kept me socially busy. He did not want to see me alone. His phone calls (always greeted with a 'YOU" - another story there...) - 2 to 3 days a month meant we would be having dinner with the family (yes - Outback), watching a movie, D&D or anything else. It was always fun and he was a best friend for 37 years. No more sad tears. He would not like tears - only the kind of tears he would like were the ones that made you laugh until you cry. We shared many of those.

“ This video is a true depiction of Daves personality. E shared a passion for many things but Macintosh was probably our greatest similarity. I will miss our conversations, our Friday lunches at Chik-Fil-A, and his bigger than life laugh! We have lost a truly great man and my heart will feel this loss long time to come...

“ Over the past few years, I couldn't wait to run down to Dave's office after every Game of Thrones episode, to pick his brain about what happened the night before (especially considering that George Martin's story line had been lapped by the HBO series). We could have spent hours talking about the books and the show. His mind worked differently and I appreciated a new perspective on the plot twists and character developments. I nearly emailed George Martin and begged him for a copy of the upcoming book, Winds of Winter, so Dave could read it before he passed. I will savor every page in his memory, and think of him when HBO's final Game of Thrones season concludes in 2019. He will be in my thoughts with every gory death, dragon and dire wolf sequence and battle scene, until the final character takes their seat atop the Iron Throne. I'll miss his analysis more than words can say.

“ Kathy,

I never would have thought that I would have had the relationship that Dave and I forged together over the last 4 years when I started at Delran. Being in our office together has been interesting to say the least. Dave was a great guy and told you what he thought with no filter and that is what I loved about him (even though I told him he couldn't say those things out loud). After getting to know you through this process I realized that you guys were a perfect match and shared the same qualities except you have the filter.

He left a lasting impression and will be missed GREATLY missed.

“ Dear Kathy, Heather and Brian:

All of the stories that you shared about your memories with Dave were wonderful. You all enjoyed your life together. Dave will always be with you and the memories will live in your hearts. I am so sorry for your loss and my deepest sympathies are with you all at this time of sorrow.
