“ I came across this obituary because I always think of Evelyn on her birthday and just Googled her. In past years, it never yielded much in the way of results. I knew she worked in health care and had moved back east. So many memories from so long ago. Meeting her in chemistry class and discovering she was this unbelievably bright (in spirit and intelligence) and shy girl who listened to Armored Saint and read Herman Hesse. Shooting pool in a biker bar at 9 in the morning because the place was empty and they'd give us Coca-Cola in red Solo cups. Then going to the mall where we'd window shop and then eat at Sbarro's. I'd be alternately fascinated by and nagging about her smoking--she'd let the ash grow so long on the end of her cigarette, I was sure it would ruin her pizza but it never happened. She'd tear her slice up with her fingers and somehow managed to not get any tomato sauce under her very long nails. So effortlessly cool. We'd hit Baskin-Robbins on the way home. She'd always get Rainbow Sherbet. When I moved to Philadelphia, she came to visit and I took a ton of photos of her as we played tourist. We lost touch in the early 1990s as people do as their lives take different tracks but I always remembered her and thought of her, as I've said, on her birthday, especially. I always hoped for the best for her as she was such a kind and gentle soul. I'm so sorry for her family and friends that they have lost such a truly wonderful person. May her memory be a comfort to you all. --

“ My name is Jenn Brewer and I'd like to send my condolences to Angelo and Renee's family. Renee and I met while taking classes to get into nursing school. Once we met we became life long friends as we got accepted to nursing school together and supported eachother through all of those up and downs! Once we graduated we had girls night with myself, Nadene Galloza, and Renee to catch up on life! Even during a very difficult time in my life, Renee and Angelo opened up their home to me for quite some time so I would have a place to stay. Renee was such a loving person and was a fantastic nurse! May she rest in peace and may his be with Angelo and her family. She was a treasure and will surely be missed! I love you girl!!! -Jenn
