“ Evelyn Naomi Pike, Mom, Mommom, Grandmom, Evelyn....
She meant a lot to a lot of people but touched each one differently in her own way. To Harry she was his world, his rock, his life. I remember watching her many summer days filling big metal coolers with ice water for him, Roger and the workers in the fields. She always cooked a big breakfast, lunch and dinner for her family. She taught me how to churn butter, how not to fry chicken, and to always eat waffles with ice cream. She was a homemaker... She ironed, she cleaned, she shopped. She LOVED to shop!
Her kitchen door never stayed closed very long. People were always stopping by for a visit. They would knock or yell as they opened the door because it was never locked. She loved company. It was many years later that I realized why she lugged all the heavy laundry to the laundry mat all her life. It wasn't because they couldn't afford a washer/dryer, it wasn't because they didn't have room for a set ... it was because she loved the company. The people. She enjoyed talking to everybody.
She wasn't the affectionate type. She didn't say, "I love you" very often, but when she grinned at you, you saw it in her eyes. You knew what she meant. And when she was mad at you, you saw it in her eyes. Oh, you knew what she meant. No doubt, you KNEW she was mad... But she also had a good sense of humor. The family knew they could poke fun at her to make her laugh. We used to joke a lot.
