“ I first met Marjorie when I was about 22 and she was 28. I was newly hired at a research lab down in Philadelphia and several weeks later Marjorie was brought in along with the head of research as his administrative assistant, and would be my supervisor. With her very British personality I thought, "oh, no, don't tell me she's going to be my boss". But it was a very short time when I realized she was a wonderful person, had quite a sense of humor, and was so easy to work with/for. We were going to meet this summer and have lunch or dinner together. Living about 60 miles apart we, unfortunately, were not able to get together as often as we wanted. I will miss her friendship, her humor and her laugh. Godspeed, Marjorie.
