“ A couple years prior to meeting Bill, I had lost my dad, but getting to know Bill was like getting my daddy back. The “unpolitically correct” way he spoke, it was refreshing to me. Bill pretended to be a tough cranky old man, but he was truly a marshmallow inside. He loved his wife more than anything, and that is what keeps me from being a wreck, knowing he’s with her again. Bill was a good man, with a big heart, and (though he might have served in the Air Force) the mouth of a sailor....and I will miss him. I love you Bill. Rest easy old man! See you on the other side.
